Your Future

Drawing is a foundational instructional component, unifying students' studio experience in all areas of study in the department. At this level, drawing is implemented as a means to understanding the visual world and as the simplest method to organize visual ideas, connecting all other artistic mediums. As a concentration area, drawing is taught as a broadly defined medium, while emphasizing pictorial form in drawing as a finished expression.

The Department of Art has maintained a commitment to a drawing curriculum based on the development of traditional skills through observational drawing and an understanding of human anatomy. Using a variety of media, courses include instruction in technical development, historical and contemporary issues, and the various possibilities of artistic exploration being conducted in contemporary drawing.
