General Instructions:
Your RA will facilitate a conversation with you and your roommate(s) at the beginning of the Fall Semester (or any time you change roommates), but you are free to update and edit this agreement at any time through conversation with your roommate(s).

With your roommate(s) you will discuss your expectations of living together as well as develop compromises and communication strategies. By setting expectations early and clearly defining ways to address conflicts or disagreements you and your roommate will be able to more effectively control the type of experience you have while living in Cardinal Village.

This agreement gives you tips on communication, general expectations for living with a roommate, common questions and expectations to discuss, and a formal roommate agreement that you and your roommate(s) will sign. Answer each of the questions provided after thoughtfully discussing each one and coming to a consensus of what type of experience you are all expecting this year.

Why Should I Complete a Roommate Agreement?
- To avoid the dreaded “lack of communication” that causes most issues with roommates
- To make sure everyone’s needs are met
- Set ground rules for the suite
- To start the year off right

Roommate Bill of Rights:
Residents of University Housing are entitled to The Right To:
- be free from undue interference (noise, guests, etc.)
- sleep free from undue disturbance
- expect the respect of personal belongings
- a clean and tidy living environment
- free access to one’s room and facilities without pressure from roommates
- expect one’s roommate will not violate terms of the Housing and Residence Life Handbook
- be free from harassment and discrimination
- expect that any and all disagreements will be discussed in an atmosphere of openness and mutual respect, and that it is acceptable to confront one’s roommate when the roommate is not fulfilling mutual agreements
- live in a smoke-, drug-, and alcohol-free environment

Communication Tips:
Communication is a key component of living with others. You need to be open; Ask questions, share concerns, discuss solutions, be mindful of others. Be proactive and reach out to your roommate early if you feel there are concerns or issues that need to be addressed within your suite. Timeliness can go a long way in solving issues before they have a negative impact. Explain things to your roommate(s) and give reasons why those things are bothering you in a mature and honest way.

In these conversations, though, you need to always:
- Be Honest and open about your concerns
- LISTEN! Remember that compromise is important
- Be aware of the best time to address concerns; we all have hectic and/or bad days
- Think before you speak. Know what you are trying to say and convey before you discuss it
- If things cannot be worked out between you and your roommate(s) get your RA involved so they can help you out

Roommate Agreement

With your roommate(s), define “Clean” and agree to a cleaning schedule as needed. Remember, that the housing handbook requires that each suite be cleaned by the residents of the space (including the toilet, bathtub, sinks, and common spaces) and that at all times there needs to be a safe exit path from the suite and to the windows.

With your roommate(s), define your expectations of “study time” (this should include specifics on study habits, noise levels, guest expectations, finals week expectations, communication strategies, and other expectations you each have).

With your roommate(s), define the expectations of guests in the suite. Overnight guests must be approved by your roommate(s) prior to submitting for approval to your building professional staff member. Other guests need to be checked in with security, but you should always ok them with your roommate first. Think about times guests are able to be in the space, when do guests need to leave, how loud can guests be when in the space, what can guests do in the suite, and any other things you believe are important to discuss. (Refer to the Housing and Residence Life policy)

With your roommate(s), discuss your personal property expectations. What is your roommate(s) allowed to use without your permission, with permission? Can your roommate(s) enter your bedroom without your permission? Can guests?

Other expectations of the suite and your roommate(s) should be discussed here.
